Official Memorandum dated the 30th August 1951.

A copy of the Press Note of 28th May 1951, issued by the Indian Standards Institution, New Delhi, on the Standard Specification for the National Flag of India (Cotton Khadi) is re-published for general information.

No. M. 10140—G.M. 34-51-2. "Two flags, one of silk and the other of cotton khadi, specially designed and manufactured for the adoption of the National Flag of India, were presented to the Constituent Assembly of India by the Hon'ble Shri Jawaharlal Nehru on July 22, 1947. At the same time, a resolution, moved by the Prime Minister, was adopted by the Assembly in which the broad features of the flag were described. The resolution, naturally, did not purport to furnish full details regarding the quality of the cloth and other particulars required for the manufacture of flags. Necessity, therefore, arose for the preparation of self-contained specifications for the National Flag of India.

The Army Headquarters had issued a working drawing for the National Flag for the use of the Army, and they suggested to the Indian Standards Institution to issue a standard for the National Flag on the basis of their requirements. The Government of India, in the meanwhile, expressed a desire that the cloth used for the manufacture of the flag for use by Government should be hand-spun and hand-woven khadi. Accordingly, it was decided to formulate standards 'for the National Flag involving the use of hand-spun and hand-woven cotton, woollen and silk fabrics.

The finalised standard just published by the Indian Standards Institution: 'Indian Standard Specification for the National Flag of India (Cotton Khadi)', deals only with the National Flags made of cotton khadi. The standards for flags made of wool and silk are under preparation.

The published standard describes with illustration, the general design and constructional details of the flag in full, and prescribes dimensions of the various parts of the flag standardised to six sizes including the one for motor cars. The standard also lays down, inter alia, the specifications for the yarn and constructional details of cotton khadi bunting in bleached and in dyed state. For evaluating the specified characteristics, such as colour fastness to light and washing, the standard contains methods of test described in separate appendices.

In order to ensure uniformity of shades of colours in the flag, namely India Saffron, India Green and Navy Blue, it has been necessary to prescribe colour values in terms of trichromatic coefficients corresponding to the colours of the original Constituent Assembly flags.

But with a view to make it possible for cottage and small scale producer to be able to match these colours, the Indian Standards Institution has arranged to issue separately a set of standard colour shade samples at nominal cost.

The standard (I.S: 1-1951), priced Rs. 2 per copy is available for sale, and may be had from the Secretary, (Administration), Indian Standards Institution, 19 University Road, Civil Lines, Delhi 8."
